Reviewing Using the IMET: ELA

Module 101: High-quality Texts, Evidence-based Discussion and Writing, and Building Knowledge

Essential Questions:

- How does the Instructional Materials Evaluation Tool (IMET) reflect the major features of the Standards and the Shifts?
- What understandings support high-quality, accurate application of the IMET metrics?

Goals:

☑ Understand how aligned materials embody the shifts inherent in the Common Core State Standards
☑ Understand the precise meaning of each metric
☑ Recognize examples and non-examples related to each IMET criteria metric
Common Core Shifts for English Language Arts/Literacy

1. Regular practice with complex text and its academic language

Rather than focusing solely on the skills of reading and writing, the Standards highlight the growing complexity of the texts students must read to be ready for the demands of college and careers. The Standards build a staircase of text complexity so that all students are ready for the demands of college- and career-level reading no later than the end of high school. Closely related to text complexity—and inextricably connected to reading comprehension—is a focus on academic vocabulary: words that appear in a variety of content areas (such as ignite and commit).

2. Reading, writing and speaking grounded in evidence from text, both literary and informational

The Standards place a premium on students writing to sources, i.e., using evidence from texts to present careful analyses, well-defended claims, and clear information. Rather than asking students questions they can answer solely from their prior knowledge or experience, the Standards expect students to answer questions that depend on their having read the text or texts with care. The Standards also require the cultivation of narrative writing throughout the grades, and in later grades a command of sequence and detail will be essential for effective argumentative and informational writing.

Likewise, the reading standards focus on students’ ability to read carefully and grasp information, arguments, ideas and details based on text evidence. Students should be able to answer a range of text-dependent questions, questions in which the answers require inferences based on careful attention to the text.

3. Building knowledge through content-rich nonfiction

Building knowledge through content rich non-fiction plays an essential role in literacy and in the Standards. In K–5, fulfilling the standards requires a 50–50 balance between informational and literary reading. Informational reading primarily includes content rich non-fiction in history/social studies, science and the arts; the K–5 Standards strongly recommend that students build coherent general knowledge both within each year and across years. In 6–12, ELA classes place much greater attention to a specific category of informational text—literary nonfiction—than has been traditional. In grades 6–12, the Standards for literacy in history/social studies, science and technical subjects ensure that students can independently build knowledge in these disciplines through reading and writing.

To be clear, the Standards do require substantial attention to literature throughout K–12, as half of the required work in K–5 and the core of the work of 6–12 ELA teachers.

Reviewing using the IMET: ELA Module 101

NN Metric 1A: Anchor texts in the materials have the appropriate level of complexity for the grade as defined by the standards, according to quantitative and qualitative analysis. (Texts that are part of a series or chosen to build knowledge or for independent reading should vary in complexity levels.)

NN Metric 1B: Anchor texts in the materials are of publishable quality and worthy of especially careful reading; they include a mix of informational texts and literature.

PRACTICE: Quantitative and Qualitative Text Complexity--High-quality Texts

Below is an excerpt from The Great Fire, an informational book written by Jim Murphy. We will be working closely with this text throughout the day.

Excerpt from The Great Fire by Jim Murphy

The Great Fire of Chicago is considered the largest disaster of the 1800s. It is rumored to have started in the barn of Patrick and Catherine O’Leary.

(1) A shed attached to the barn was already engulfed by flames. It contained two tons of coal for the winter and a large supply of kindling wood. Fire ran along the dry grass and leaves, and took hold of a neighbor’s fence. The heat from the burning barn, shed, and fence was so hot that the O’Learys’ house, forty feet away, began to smolder. Neighbors rushed from their homes, many carrying buckets or pots of water. The sound of music and merrymaking stopped abruptly, replaced by the shout of “FIRE!” It would be a warning cry heard thousands of times during the next thirty-one hours.

(2) Chicago in 1871 was a city ready to burn. The city boasted having 59,500 buildings, many of them—such as the Courthouse and the Tribune Building—large and ornately decorated. The trouble was that about two-thirds of all these structures were made entirely of wood. Many of the remaining buildings (even the ones proclaimed to be “fireproof”) looked solid, but were actually jerrybuilt affairs; the stone or brick exteriors hid wooden frames and floors, all topped with highly flammable tar or shingle roofs. It was also a common practice to disguise wood as another kind of building material. The fancy exterior decorations on just about every building were carved from wood, then painted to look like stone or marble. Most churches had steeples that appeared to be solid from the street, but a closer inspection would reveal a wooden framework covered with cleverly painted copper or tin.

(3) The situation was worst in the middle-class and poorer districts. Lot sizes were small, and owners usually filled them up with cottages, barns, sheds, and outhouses—all made of fast-burning wood, naturally. Because both Patrick and Catherine O’Leary worked, they were able to put a large addition on their cottage despite a lot size of just 25 by 100 feet. Interspersed in these residential areas were a variety of businesses—paint factories, lumberyards, distilleries, gasworks, mills, furniture manufacturers, warehouses, and coal distributors.

(4) Wealthier districts were by no means free of fire hazards. Stately stone and brick homes had wood interiors and stood side by side with smaller wood-frame houses. Wooden stables and other storage buildings were common, and trees lined the streets and filled the yards.

1 Built cheaply or poorly constructed
(5) The links between richer and poorer sections went beyond the materials used for construction or the way buildings were crammed together. Chicago had been built largely on soggy marshland that flooded every time it rained. As the years passed and the town developed, a quick solution to the water and mud problem was needed. The answer was to make the roads and sidewalks out of wood and elevate them above the waterline, in some places by several feet. On the day the fire started, over 55 miles of pine-block streets and 600 miles of wooden sidewalks bound the 23,000 acres of the city in a highly combustible knot.

(6) Fires were common in all cities back then, and Chicago was no exception. In 1863 there had been 186 reported fires in Chicago; the number had risen to 515 by 1868. Records for 1870 indicate that fire-fighting companies responded to nearly 600 alarms. The next year saw even more fires spring up, mainly because the summer had been unusually dry. Between July and October only a few scattered showers had taken place and these did not produce much water at all. Trees drooped in the unrelenting summer sun; grass and leaves dried out. By October, as many as six fires were breaking out every day. On Saturday the seventh, the night before the Great Fire, a blaze destroyed four blocks and took over sixteen hours to control. What made Sunday the eighth different and particularly dangerous was the steady wind blowing in from the southwest.

(7) It was this gusting, swirling wind that drove the flames from the O’Learys’ barn into neighboring yards. To the east, a fence and shed of James Dalton’s went up in flames; to the west, a barn smoldered for a few minutes, then flared up into a thousand yellow-orange fingers.

Short Story by Jean Davies Okimoto

Why This Text?

As students become more accomplished readers, they are better able to analyze the elements that develop a story's plot and characters. This lesson focuses on plot and character development, helping students connect to the characters and their conflicts.

Key Learning Objective: The student will be able to recognize and analyze the elements of a story’s plot and the author’s methods of characterization.

Common Core Standards

- RL 1 Cite textual evidence.
- RL 2 Determine a theme or central idea; summarize.
- RL 3 Analyze how dialogue propels action and reveals character.
- RL 4 Analyze the impact of specific word choices on meaning and tone.
- W 2 Write informative/explanatory text to examine a topic.
- W 4 Produce clear and coherent writing.
- W 9a Apply grade 8 Reading standards to literature.
- W 10 Write routinely over extended and shorter time frames.
- L 1c Form and use verbs in the imperative mood.
- L 4a Use context as a clue to the meaning of a word or phrase.
- L 4d Verify word meanings in a dictionary.

Text Complexity Rubric

Quantitative Measures

- Lexile: 830L

Qualitative Measures

- Levels of Meaning/Purpose
  - multiple levels of meaning (multiple themes)
- Structure
  - less familiar story concepts
- Language Convenionality and Clarity
  - less straightforward sentence structure
- Knowledge Demands
  - experience contains unfamiliar aspects
- Teacher determined
  - Vary by individual reader and type of text

The Importance of Text

Quality texts are critical for English language arts instruction. “Quality” means a text’s language is at or above grade level and the content of the text is appropriately complex and connected to themes, concepts, or topics students are learning. All students, even the most struggling readers, must regularly have access to texts that are at or above grade level. This does not mean students do not also engage with texts on their reading level (they may during small groups) but whole-group instruction must remain rigorous and complex.

Texts should be varied and include fiction or literary texts, nonfiction or informational texts, and nonprint texts (e.g., art, film, songs, etc.). Students should have the opportunity to formulate their own ideas about these texts and communicate them either in writing or orally to their peers. Grade-level standards provide the criteria for reading, formulating ideas, and expressing those ideas about quality texts. As such, the text, use of standards with that text, and connection of that text to other texts are among the most important choices an ELA teacher will make.

Text Quality

Texts must be both linguistically complex and instructionally useful based on the grade-level standards. Teachers use the following criteria to ensure texts are appropriate and meaningful for their students:

- Texts are complex.
  - Use this guide to determine if your text meets the complexity expectations of Reading Standard 10 and Reading Standard 4 in grades K-1 for student-read texts.
  - Review all of the texts already reviewed and listed by grade bands in Appendix B of the standards.

- Texts are instructionally useful.
  - Texts build student knowledge about universal themes, diverse cultures, and other perspectives (e.g., RL.2.9, RI.5.6 or RL.9-10.6).
  - Texts are available and include commonly read authors or genres that are mentioned in grade-specific standards (e.g., Shakespeare or mysteries, RL.4.9, RL.6.9, RI.11-12.9, Grade 3 overview, Grade 7 overview.).
  - Texts represent major historical events and time periods, popular science, music, and art or connect to other content areas (e.g., RL.1.9, RI.3.3 or RI.8.9). Texts interest students or provide opportunities for building reading stamina and perseverance.

- Texts include age-appropriate content. Decisions about content appropriateness must be made locally. While text titles are provided in the sample units, local districts, schools, and teachers should make the final determination of which texts will be read in Louisiana classrooms.

- Texts are authentic. They are written by a published author and/or are high-quality and contain accurate information as opposed to short passages expressly written for the purpose of teaching a discrete ELA skill.

Text Sets

The unit plans included in this guidebook (page 25) illustrate quality text choice and are organized as a text set. The anchor text is the focus text for the unit—a quality text that students read and understand and then express their understanding of as they work with the grade-level standards. The supporting texts help students make meaning of the themes, concepts, or topics highlighted in the anchor text.

Here is a sample of a text set from grade 3.

<td>Unit Focus: Students learn that stories and books are important for learning about themselves and others. This unit allows students to learn how storytelling can be a way to learn about other cultures, pass on family history and traditions, and build a strong identity. Putting the same character in different situations can teach readers about how motivations, feelings, and a person’s actions affect events and other people. Students will also learn that sharing stories can build relationships and connect them to others.</td>

* Readily accessible text: The language (words, sentence structure) might be at or below grade level but the content is complex and suitable for the grade level, or the language is at grade level and the content is less complex.

Moderately complex text: The language is at grade level, and the content is suitable for the grade level.

Very complex text: The language is at or slightly above grade level, and the content is significantly complex.
How to Read the Unit Plans

The unit plans are built around the instructional framework illustrated in the front section of this guide. They help teachers use high-quality texts and use the standards for students to understand and to express understanding of those texts.

These plans model standards-aligned whole-class instruction. Instruction for small-group reading, small-group writing, and independent reading must be unique to the individual students in your classroom and support your students in meeting grade-level standards during whole-class instruction. To learn more about how to support individual student needs in those instructional areas, visit the Teacher Support Toolbox.

SAMPLE UNIT PLAN

UNIT: THE STORIES JULIAN TELLS

1. The anchor and related texts were selected based on text selection criteria on page 9.
2. The unit focus identifies the knowledge and skills students will build by reading complex texts.
3. There is a balance of literary and informational texts within this unit.
4. Units include print texts and nonprint multimedia texts.
5. The texts are rich and complex so that students have opportunities to meet many of the standards in a single unit.
6. The related texts offer opportunities for coordination across content areas.

The Stories Julian Tells Unit Overview

Unit Focus
- Topics: Reading, storytelling
- Themes: The joy of reading and the importance of storytelling and reading to learn lessons and make connections
- Text Use: Determining central idea or message, theme development through characters and setting, vocabulary and distinguishing between literal and nonliteral language, and comparison of points of view

Unit Focus

Summative Unit Assessments
A culminating writing task:
- Identify a central message
- Describe main characters
- Examine how a central message is conveyed through characters
A cold-read task:
- Read and understand grade-level texts
- Write in response to text
An extension task:
- Write a narrative from pictures
- Develop a recorded presentation

Daily Tasks
Daily instruction helps students read and understand text and express that understanding.
- Lesson 1: The Bee Tree (sample tasks)
- Lesson 2: "A Page Is a Door" (sample tasks)
- Lesson 3: The Fantastic Flying Books of Mr. Morris Lessmore (sample tasks)
- Lesson 4: My Librarian Is a Camel: How Books Are Brought to Children Around the World and various texts for group research (sample tasks)
- Lesson 5: "The Pudding Like a Night on the Sea" from The Stories Julian Tells
- Lesson 6: "Catalog Cats" and "Our Garden" from The Stories Julian Tells
- Lesson 7: "Because of Figs" from The Stories Julian Tells (sample tasks)
- Lesson 8: "My Very Strange Teeth" from The Stories Julian Tells
- Lesson 9: The Fantastic Flying Books of Mr. Morris Lessmore (film) and The Red Book (extension task)
- Lesson 10: "Gloria Who Might Be My Best Friend" from The Stories Julian Tells (sample tasks)
- Lesson 11: "I Learn Firefighting" from More Stories Julian Tells (cold-read task and culminating writing task)

1. All units have a unit focus, summative unit assessments, and daily tasks.
2. The unit focus answers the question: “What do I want my students to learn from texts?”
3. The summative unit assessments answer the question: “How will I determine if my students can read grade-level texts and meet standards?”
4. The culminating writing task ask students to write in response to a text.
5. The cold-read assessment measures students’ ability to read and understand sufficiently complex texts.
6. The extension task incorporates research about related unit topics.
7. The daily tasks answer the question: “How will I help students read and understand texts and express their understanding?”

¹ 4M1A has been revised by NYSED. The revised version will be posted in summer 2014. The Iroquois: The Six Nation Confederacy will continue to be used as a central text. The Keeping Quilt has been added as a read-aloud in Unit 3. Eagle Song will no longer be a required text for this module; it will be an optional independent read with an independent reading guide. There also will be several mini-lessons for in-class discussions if teachers choose to use this novel.

² Based on field feedback, the novel Dark Water Rising has been removed from 5M4. Districts using 5M4 in the 2013-14 school year: teach just Units 1 and 3. For 2014-15, Unit 2 of 5M4 will be revised. Eight Days: A Story of Haiti will remain. The new unit will not require any new text purchases.
